Sixty-eight years and this my birthday,
And still I travel on life's stormy way;
And how have I travelled these long years spent,
And have I deserved the time to repent?

Sixty-eight years and yet do I stay,
And have not the promise of even one day;
And what are my hopes when called to depart
Have I love for my Savior and a pure heart?

Sixty-eight years have passed out of sight,
It seems like a dream, a dream of the night;
Each day I expect a call to leave here,
Leave earth and come hither and thither appear.

Sixty-eight years, are past, now gone;
What good to mankind have I done?
When the time comes I can only crave
Forgiveness of Jesus, and enter the grave.

*Note—The following is an obituary of the Hon. Ozias Mather Hatch.

Ozias Mather Hatch, a prominent citizen of Illinois and one of the pioneers of the Republican party in that state, died at his home in Springfield, Ill., Mar. 12, 1893. He was born in the town of Hillsborough, New Hampshire, Apr. 11, 1814, being the third child of Dr. Reuben Hatch, a native of Alstead, N. H. He received an ordinary common school education, supplemented with brief attendance at a private school and Academy, working upon his father's farm in the summer season, until fifteen years of age. He then went to Boston, and was engaged for seven years as a clerk in the wholesale and retail grocery of Meriam & Brown.

At the age of 22, he removed to Griggsville, Pike Co., Ill., where his father had gone the previous year. He was appointed clerk of the Circuit Court of Pike County, serving 7 years. He subsequently engaged in general mercantile business; and in 1851, was elected to represent Pike County in the State Legislature.

In 1856, upon the organization of the Republican party, he was made the nominee of the party for Secretary of State, was elected, and after a term of 4 years, was re-elected, making 8 years service in all in this responsible position.

He was a close friend of Abraham Lincoln and Richard Yates and was deeply interested in the Union cause during the war. He was an original member of the National Lincoln Monument Association and Secretary of the same, and was largely instrumental in securing the funds for the erection of the Lincoln Monument in Oak Ridge Park, Springfield.

He was a public-spirited citizen, and prominent in various local enterprises in Springfield where he resided after his election as Secretary of State.

"Through the influence and example of a loving Christian mother, he sought Christ at an early age, and united with the Congregational Church. Being a delicate youth and unable to perform heavy labor on the farm, he obtained the consent of his father to seek a more liberal education than he could obtain at home. By his own exertions, he went to the university at Norwich, Vt.; also to the Seminary at Newbury, Vt. In 1835, he came West to Illinois. While teaching, he often wrote for various periodicals, East and West; and at length established the "Prairie Farmer" afterwards published at Chicago. Later at Springfield, he commenced the publication of the first daily paper issued in Illinois. Moving to Indianapolis not long afterwards, he did the same thing for Indiana, so had the honor of being the Pioneer Editor and Publisher of dailies in both of these great states. He also published several juvenile, agricultural, and miscellaneous journals in Indiana and Minnesota during his busy and useful life.

A number of years were devoted to teaching, however, a profession in which he was remarkably successful, and among his old pupils and friends were some who became distinguished in military and civic life. While at Springfield, he was intimately acquainted with Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas. In Indianapolis, he numbered Henry Ward Beecher among his friends and contributors. Four years of his life in Indiana were spent as a missionary of the American Sunday School Union.

In 1859, he moved to Wisconsin; established the first graded school at Prescott, taught a year, then became County Superintendent. Again he entered Sunday School work, and continued in it for eight years in Wisconsin and Minnesota, soon removing his headquarters to Minneapolis. From that point, he worked out to the frontier settlements planting Sunday schools wherever possible; and had the pleasure of seeing many churches and Sunday Schools grow from his little schools, started often amid great difficulties.

The exposure during his long rides, and often insufficient accommodations began to tell on his health; and after a second attack of pneumonia, he made a visit to Tennessee. He was delighted with the climate and finally removed to Nashville in the fall of 1875. He became interested in the immigration work, and established the "Southern Industries," a journal devoted to that object; and was for a time Assistant Commissioner of Immigration for the State. In that capacity, and with his widely circulated paper, he felt that he was engaged in the crowning missionary work of his life; and it was a severe struggle when he was compelled to abandon it. His health, which he had never fully recovered, failed rapidly. Laryngitis and bronchitis combined to weaken him; and on the 27th of October, 1880, while out, providing for his family, he succeeded in reaching a neighbor's, and said to his wife who was soon with him, 'I think this is the last;' and soon passed over the river." (The above was furnished by his daughter, Annette B. Hatch, in 1928.)

ii. William Hyman[9], b. 8 Oct., 1843 in Indianapolis, Ind. The family having moved to Minneapolis, Minn., he attended the public elementary and high schools of that city. With the outbreak of the Civil War, he enlisted as a boy of fifteen, and had a part in some of the most important engagements. He was with General Sherman in his march to the sea. He was mustered out with an honorable record. After the war, he returned to his home and prepared for work as an educator. Upon the completion of his studies, he obtained a position in the Minneapolis public schools; and then for a time at Council Bluffs, Iowa. He was engaged in business for a time, but his interest in the school-room was too great for him to resist a call to accept the position of teacher in the high school at Rock Island, Ill. Following his service here, he was Superintendent of Schools in Moline for four years, resigning there to accept the Superintendency of Schools at Oak Park in 1892, where he served for 25 years, retiring in 1917. He had md. 8 Jan., 1876 in Minneapolis, Nellie Augusta Florida, dau. of Joel and Lucinda (Woodward). She was b. 4 May, 1846 in Belvidere, Ill. After his retirement in 1917, he returned to a country home in Rockford, Minn., where he and his wife, to whom he was very devoted, lived in rest and recreation. They had enjoyed a long and happy married life, though without posterity. She d. 13 Aug., 1925. While on a visit to Oak Park, Ill., he fell and fractured his hip; and was in a hospital for fifteen weeks. The Oak Park Board of Education so much appreciated him and his work among them that they paid all his hospital and nurse's fees, and sent a nurse home with him when he was able to return to Minn. He d. from the effects of the accident on 26 Dec., 1926, in a Minneapolis hospital.

vi. Herbert Hazelton[9], b. 9 Oct., 1854 at Franklin, Ind. d. unm. 1 July, 1925. He was practically reared in his father's printing office in Prescott, Wis., so that in after years, he made printing his profession. Before going South where his father had gone, he worked in several printing offices as compositor; at one time was at Cleveland, O. In 1879, he and his brother Charles R. established the printing firm of C. R. and H. H. Hatch in Nashville, Tenn.; and made a specialty of show printing in which they had a wide business throughout the South. He was of a very artistic nature which was a great help in his work. His deeds of charity were not made public on account of his being of so retiring a disposition. He was a member of the Congregational Church while in Minneapolis but never sent for his letter of recommendation while in Nashville. He was a great reader, and would have made a good syndicate writer but did not have confidence enough in himself. Never very strong, he suffered a nervous breakdown, and was confined at home for several years before his death in 1925.

ISSUE: by 3rd wife.

Curtis became blind when about 32 years of age, and remained so for 40 years. Of his ten children, he saw but two. He was able to chop wood, dig potatoes, help with threshing, etc.

The family moved to Waseca County, Minn. During the Indian troubles in this state many white people were killed, Mrs. Hatch had a trying experience. The responsibility of caring for her blind husband and her little children was a great one at such a time. The farmers and their families who had not been scalped, were forced to flee to a place of safety. Mrs. Hatch made ready to go with them, but would not leave until the last. She packed her old-fashioned carpet-bag with necessary clothing for the baby and hung it by the door just so a part of it could be seen through the window. It was ready to "grab" at a moment's notice. They had a root-cellar adjoining the back of the house, and in this, the mother had the father and children hide. She closed the door, and barricaded it the best she could; then with her tallow candle for a light, she sat down to watch for the enemy. Suddenly she heard a noise and thought that the Indians were coming. She put out the light, when she saw what she thought to be the head of a person at the window.

She commanded it twice to leave, and as it did not move, she struck it with her fist, and sent the unfortunate carpet-bag across the kitchen floor, scattering its contents. Of course, the family laughed but the occurrence showed the bravery of the mother. The following morning the last family living near them drove up, and would not leave until Mr. and Mrs. Hatch should accompany them. The older boys yoked up their oxen, feather beds were put in the wagon, and onto these the poor blind father and the children were placed; and then covered over with other bedding to prevent their being seen should they be attacked by Indians. Their stock and all else had to be left behind. The horror of that time is still fresh in the memory of Mrs. Henrietta C. Hatch-Heath who as a small child was a witness of the above. She is now (1925) 72 years of age, and furnished the above sketch of her father.

649. James Jason Hatch[8], (James[7], Asa[6], Joseph[5], Ichabod[4], Joseph [3], Jonathan[2], Thomas[1]), b. at Williamstown, Vt., 4 or 11 Jan., 1816; md. 8 Jan., 1839, Jane Conant, dau. of Samuel, Jr. and Fidelia (Estabrook) Adams of Williamstown, a relative of John Q. Adams. She was b. 22 July, 1815 at Williamstown. James J. and family removed from Vermont to Ill. about 1845; and in 1856 to Iola, Wis., and located on a farm. The journey is thus described by his daughter, Ellen Amelia, when she was near eighty years of age. "I was only three and a half years old but know from later events that we must have traveled around some as the twins were born at Warren, Ill.; and Jason A. at Waukegan; then we went north to Iola, Wis., where father built a house on his land a little distance from Uncle Henry's (No. 648). We moved into it when there were neither doors nor windows; and the work-bench was there for father's spare-time work. Fever and ague and 'prairie storms' are the first facts I remember, but I've not forgotten a thing since. One day, Emma, Harlan, the baby, and I had the 'shakes,' and an electric storm, a 'prairie storm' broke over us. Mother had just fed us some gruel; left her chair to set away the bowl when a bolt of lightning struck the gable of the house upstairs, tore a splinder a yard long, near us, which hung by one end, and almost over her chair; then the bolt went through the floor, ran along the sleeper, then through it and outdoors. It knocked mother on to the bed across which she was trying to reach. We were all stunned. I remember how queerly my ears felt. Mother soon rallied to the condition of things and prepared us to go to Uncle Henry's (No. 648), as father was away from home. Just as we were ready to start Uncle Crosby Lewis came in, drenched with the rain, and exclaimed, 'Well, Jane, you've been spoke to pretty loud! Haint ye!' He was frightened too, but helped us to Uncle Henry's, we little 'shaking quakers.' It seems like I have been awake ever since.

"Yes, I remember Barna, Uncle Sanford's son, and Uncle Reuben. Of course I was a very little girl when they visited my folks at Waukegan. I believe they lived in LaSalle, Ill., where some of Sanford's children lived. Cousin Barna came from Vermont about the time my parents came West. I can remember him at Charles Wolcott's, trying to play the fiddle, much to my mother's detestation. I have a special reason for remembering Barna on one occasion. One Sunday my father went somewhere to preach and took with him my mother, leaving Emma and me with Barna. We were about six and seven years old—Oh, those long, rigid Sundays—In the afternoon, we got so tired of being good that we got to playing around the room. Barna was sitting in the open door reading. Goodness knows why! but he suddenly commanded, 'Silence.' Soon he got up, placed two chairs near him, boxed our ears, and sat us upon the chairs, and told us to sit there until the folks came home. The last time I remembered seeing him was when I was 11 or 12 years of age. He had a shake of the ague, and I do not remember of feeling very sorry for him either. Soon after this, he went to Muskegon, Mich."

James Jason was a local preacher in Iola. He died there 11 Feb., 1885; and his widow, 9 Feb., 1891.

Fish, dau. of Jason and Mera (Robbins). She was b. 1 Feb., 1825 at Leicester. His early years were those of the struggle and hardship of the farming community of those times; and while yet a lad, he passed successively from bobbin boy in the Lowell mills to a clerkship in the wholesale men's furnishings trade in Boston.

In 1849, when Dock Square and the adjacent sections formed the dry goods center of Boston and all New England, young Hatch had worked up to a partnership in Sears, Cross, and Hatch; and in 1860, he established the firm of Hatch, Johnson and Co. which later removed to New York City. In 1870, he returned to Boston, uniting with Simons, Brother and Co.; after the fire of 1872, Simons, Hatch, and Whitten was formed, and incorporated in 1898. Mr. Hatch was its president, and the sole surviving member of the original incorporators.

For many years, Mr. Hatch devoted his energy to foreign merchandising, his last crossing of the Atlantic was his seventy-sixth, just before the World War. He enjoyed a wide business acquaintance in European and American business circles because of his integrity, marked business sagacity, and his genial and attractive personality. Mr. Hatch early united with the Mother Church of the Christian Science denomination. 659. Albert Leach Hatch[8] (Larkin[7], Asa[6], Joseph[5], Ichabod[4], Joseph[3], Jonathan[2], Thomas[1]), b. at Newport (now Marine City), Mich., 16 Dec., 1842. His father Larkin (No. 345), with wife and family had recently moved from Vermont to this town. They were very poor. It is said that "their only worldly goods consisted of fifty cents in money and a cow." However, they must have possessed some simple household furniture. To make a living for his large family, Larkin labored at wood-cutting for the sum of fifty cents per cord; and it was not very long before he was able to purchase eighty acres of thickly wooded land, about four miles from the village of Algonac, Mich. Here he built a house of logs, and settled with his family. Larkin and the three eldest sons soon cleared the land with the aid of oxen, accomplishing about ten acres a year. They sowed seeds, and planted a large orchard of fruit trees—apples, pears, peaches, cherries, and so forth. In the year 1860, Larkin was known as a prosperous farmer, the log hut being replaced by a large frame house. (An electric railroad now crosses this vicinity, which is now known as Crockerville.) Albert Leach, being the youngest son, was kept at home to work on the farm; and was denied the educational advantages which fell to his sisters. He was a very faithful son, and a conscientious worker. At the breaking out of the Civil War, Albert expressed a desire to go and fight for his country, but the family realizing the value of his services at home, would not consent to this. When he became of age in 1863, nothing could hold him, so in spite of the objections and entreaties of his many relatitves, he enlisted as a private soldier in the First Regiment, Michigan Engineers and Mechanics, and served until the close of the war. He was in Sherman's famous March to the Sea; and was also in the Grand Review at Washington. In October, 1865, was honorably discharged from the army; and on returning home, he declared that he would not have missed this experience for anything. He then cleared a small farm in Clay Township, planting many maple trees, which are still flourishing. He md. at Algonac, 22 March, 1871, ADELINE MOORE, dau. of John and Vivlette (Canon). She was b. 28 Nov., 1849 at Ontario, Canada; and d. 1 Apr., 1911. In 1878, he was lighthouse keeper at St. Clair Flats, Mich. While in Algonac, he became prosperous through boats, fishing, and real estate. In 1899, he moved to Canada where he still (1926) resides hale and hearty at the age of 83 years. He receives a pension from the U. S. Government. Through life, he has enjoyed excellent health. Of disposition, is jolly, witty, kind-hearted, and exceedingly generous. Is known to all as "Dad Hatch." Prepared by his daughter, Helen Mable, third child.

iii. Helen Mabel[9], b. 29 June, 1877. "She was graduated from the Algonac High School, 1894. She began preparing for a musical career when very young; studied under several teachers of ordinary ability. In 1892, began piano study under J. C. Batchelder of Detroit, Mich., a prominent teacher of his day, being a pupil of Oskar Raif and Alfred Heinrich Ehrlich. Her progress was very rapid; and she decided to fit herself for concert work.

Being always of frail physique, her health soon gave way under the strain of five to eight hours of work at the keyboard; and for many months she was unable to use her arms. However, the following year, health returned, and she resumed work, continuing on for about five years.

In music, she found the greatest happiness, preferring hours of practice to a boating trip or other amusements enjoyed by the youth of that day. At the age of sixteen, she began teaching piano which she continued two or three years.

"In 1899, she moved with her parents to Sturgeon Falls, Ontario. From there, she went to Oberlin Conservatory of Music for another year of study.

"Lack of physical strength, and a sense of duty of her parents caused her to give up the idea of being a concert pianist. Remaining at home, she took up a class of piano pupils, and taught for a few more years.

"On New Year's morning, 1907, in the town of Sudbury, Ontario, she was md. to EDWARD HAMILTON LOW, a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont. (Edward Hamilton Low traces his descent from the ancient family of Lowe of the Lowe, Worcestershire, who also claims to descend from Hugh de Loup, Earl of Chester, nephew of William the Conqueror.)

"In the year 1914, Helen Mabel became ill with stomach trouble, which continued for eight years, developing into a chronic and most serious form of ulcer which was pronounced cancerous and incurable. Through consecration and faithful application to prayer, was miraculously healed, before the astonished eyes of doctors.

"Since being restored to perfect health she is now devoting her time to the teaching of music through the Burrows Course of Music Study, and to the practice of a holy life. Has composed a number of songs which promise to be successful."—H.M.H.L.

678. Davis William Hatch[8] (John Nicholson[7], Sylvanus[6], Joseph[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Jonathan[2], Thomas[1]), b. 14 Jan., 1856 in Calhoun Co., Texas. He received the beginning of his education in his home, from instruction give by his mother. He was obedient, high-spirited, and honorable. He was regarded by boys of his age and older as their champion and leader, as a result of his fearless attitude. At the close of the Civil War, his mother decided to send her boys to school. The Hatch family in Texas belonging to the Episcopal Church, the bishop was called into consultation as to what school they should attend. It was decided, and Davis went to the University of the South in Tennessee where he became a cadet; and was soon a great favorite with his fellow-classmates. While he was never disposed to be over-dominant, he was soon recognized as leader.

The cadets were occasionally permitted to give a Cadets' Ball. On one occasion, Davis William escorted a Miss Maggie Davis to the party. During the evening, she was approached by a gambler, and asked for a dance, to which she answered that she did not know him. The gambler became vexed, and said, "If you are too proud to dance with me, you may go to Hades." This statement was out of the hearing of Davis William, but he was directly informed that Miss Davis had been deliberately insulted by a gambler. The gambler refused to offer an apology to Miss Davis, and so was at once summoned to a combat with Davis William. They were taken to the Drill Grounds, and each of the combatants given a large bowie knife; and the battle began. Although Davis William's uniform was cut to ribbons, he sustained no serious wounds. His adversary's wounds were pronounced severe but not fatal. As soon as Jefferson Davis learned of the duel, he placed the school-grounds under double picket. Davis William was loaded on a train with a through passage to Indianola, Tex., and Jefferson Davis shoved a well-filled purse into his hands at the depot, and kissing him on the cheek, bade him "Godspeed" on his way. The gambler recovered from his wounds, and was ejected from the college grounds with a warning never to return, under penalty of being roughly handled by the cadets. Davis William returned to Texas and engaged in cattle-driving.

Some twenty miles from the Hatch residence was the small town of Indianola. It was built upon a shell reef, previously formed by a storm; and its destruction by a storm was predicated. Indianola was subject to hurricanes and storms; and the people on the Gulf shore depended upon Davis William as a champion live-saver in the case of such crisis.

In August, 1886, Indianola witnessed a heavy storm, attended with loss of property and lives. After the storm, it was decided that the town be abandoned forever. Much of the railway trackage had been washed out, but it was planned to relay it, and then ship the buildings from Indianola by rail to the town of Cuero or Port Lavaca. Appeal was made to people owning wagons and teams to assist in hauling their wrecked homes to the railroad. Many answered the call, Davis William and his brother, James C. Hatch being among the volunteers. Work soon began preparatory to the removal; and workers who had come to their assistance camped in the deserted houses. On the fifteenth of September, a storm arose during the night. Wagons were loaded, and an attempt made to move across the bridges before they were washed away. In one of the deserted homes there was a negro girl, Pinkey, who had been left in charge of the house until it could be removed. When all were loaded and ready to cross the bridge, she was summoned to join them, and thus insure her life. She refused to leave, thinking she would betray the confidence that had been placed in her. The storm was increasing and the company could not stop longer to persuade the obstinate girl. As the last wagon pulled off the bridge, the raging torrent swung the bridge into its trail. At this, Pinkey shrieked with terror. When the sound reached the company, Davis sprang from the wagon, and without making his purpose known to anyone, started to unharness one of his horses. Without asking for a partner in his desperate undertaking, he made his way back through the gradually increasing torrent, to the horrified girl . He slipped from his horse, swam beside it until he reached the threatened home. Pinkey sustained herself by clinging to a pillar. Davis reached the verandah, and here where the violence of the waves was broken by the house, he rested, and directed Pinkey to prepare for the return trip. She dropped from the verandah astride the horse. Once more, Davis swam beside the struggling horse and crossed the stream and reached the awaiting company without being submerged.

In 1895, Davis William and his brother, James, engaged in house-building. They had contracted to do some building on the east side of Matagordia Bay, and the nearest way to reach this town was to take passage by boat across the bay . They made arrangements with Captain Idlebarr for their passage, and transportation of tools. The captain had two sailors to assist him. They set sail, and after retiring for the night, were awakened by the wild plunging of the schooner, and the howling of the wind, a tornado in all its fury. Davis went to the main deck, and found that the captain had lashed himself to wheel in an attempt to save the schooner, his crew having deserted the vessel. Davis and James took their turns at the wheel, and at the end of the voyage, having reached their destination in safety, the captain wanted to compensate his passengers for their assistance, but Davis refused it, saying that he was only doing his duty.

When Port Lavaca was incorporated, and the citizens elected a mayor, the people wanted Davis to accept the appointment of Marshal. He refused the nomination because of his mother's objection to this position. He was later specially deputized to that office. The above sketch was furnished by James C. Hatch (No. 679).

679. James Collins Hatch[8], (John Nicholson[7], Sylvanus[6], Joseph[5], Ebenezer[4], Joseph[3], Jonathan[2], Thomas[1],) b. 9 Feb., 1858 in Calhoun Co., Texas. He was deprived of education to a great extent due to the fact that there were no schools in the surrounding country. His mother realizing the disadvantage, decided to hold school in her own home. Her wise decision was more or less resented, especially by James. However, her integrity and determination to complete her plans, was not lessened, and her decision was understood to be final. She assigned lessons to be learned, but James disliked to study, and he gives the following incident in this regard: "From the first, I watched my chance after a lesson had been assigned to me, to avoid studying. One day, after my mother had given me my lesson, and returned to her work, I slipped out, saddled my horse, and galloped away over the vast plains. On the following day, she surprised me. She had me remove my boot,

He was dark complexioned, having dark hair and eyes. Was five ft. nine and one-half in. height, and weighed 130 lbs. His early life was spent with his father and mother on a small farm at Lincoln. He was a blacksmith by trade and working in a foundry, had learned to make fire-tongs, hoes, rakes, etc., which later in his pioneer life proved invaluable to him and his associates. As a youth, he took such advantages of education as were afforded him by attending the public schools of Lincoln. In 1839, he accepted the Gospel of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and was baptized by Elder Sisson Chase, 27 Dec., 1840. The Gospel had been brought to them by Elder Peltiah Brown. He proved the truth of the statement that signs follow the believer; and he not only spoke in tongues and interpreted the same, but enjoyed the spirit of prophecy. He was an eloquent preacher of the principles of the Gospel; and lost no opportunity in proclaiming the same. Not far from their old home near Lincoln, was the town of Northfield. Here he went with his parents to attend Latter-day Saint services. It was here that he met Louisa Pool Alexander, a convert to Mormonism, and she later became his wife. They were md. in 1842 in Nauvoo, Hancock Co., Ill., whither they had gone with their parents in order to gather with the Saints. She was the dau. of Alva and Phebe (Houston) Alexander, and was b. 2 Jan., 1825 in Acworth, N. H. They went to Utah in 1851; made their first home in Salt Lake City. He was called as a missionary to the Indians to teach them farming and the Gospel, and hence lived in many parts of central and northern Utah. His wife d. in Smithfield, Utah, 13 Apr., 1869, leaving eight children, three having preceded her to the Great Beyond. He accepted a call as a missionary to preach the Gospel in his native state. Here he became acquainted with AURILLA HADLOCK, dau. of Archibald and Fanny (————), whom he md. some years later. She was b. 26 May, 1852, in Troy, Vt.; md abt. 1870 at Salt Lake City. He accepted the principle of plurality of wives; and md. 3rd, HENRIETTA AUGUSTINA CLARK, dau. of Israel J. and Louisa (Eynon).
